COLOUR CHANGING ROCK

We have often heard about the chameleon changing its colour, but any hill doing so seems to be a strange phenomenon. There is a hill in South Australia called Ayers' Rock that changes its colour everyday and in every season.

Henry Ayers was the Prime Minister of South Australia, hence this rock was named after him. It is an oval hill measuring 7 km in length and 2.4 km in width.

This hill is of Red colour when the sun's rays fall on it in the morning. It seems as if the entire hill is on fire. Shadows appear on this massive rock when the sun sets. From the morning till evening this will change colour from yellow to orange, then to red and to violet or even black. You might think that it is a magic will. But the reason is that this rock's structure is such that it changes its colour according to the change in the angle of the sun's rays and weather.

The tribal people living in this region used to worship it in the caves at its base. They started drawing in the caves. It was difficult to reach the hill in the olden days. But now roads have been built and this hill has become a tourist attraction.
